Port Augusta's first choice for local news

The Transcontinental enjoys a strong following in the Port Augusta region and endeavours to maintain its broad reaching appeal.

The weekly paid publication enjoys a high household penetration rate due to its close involvement and reporting of the issues which affect its community.

Situated at the head of the Spencer Gulf - the "Crossroads of Australia"- at the junction of the Stuart and Eyre highways which has historically contributed much to the state and nation wealth, Port Augusta is the nerve centre for a huge area of the state which takes in agriculture, pastoral and tourist regions.

Because of its specific position, Port Augusta also supports offices of most state and commonwealth government departments, has excellent retail facilities and a thriving service industry infrastructure.
